The Welcome. And the oft'ner you come here the more I'll adore you. Light is my heart since the day we were plighted, Red is my cheek that they told me was blighted; And the linets are singing, "True lovers don't sever!" I'll pull you sweet fi wers, to wear if you choose them,

Or, after you've kissed them, they'll lie on my bosom; I'll fetch from the mountain its breeze to inspire you; I'll sing you sweet songs till the stars rive above me, We'll look on the stars, and we'll list to the river,

Then, wandering, I'll wish you, in silence, to love me. We'll look through the trees at the cliff and the eyrie, We'll tread round the path on the track of the fairy. And trust, when in secret, most tunefully streaming. Till the starlight of heaven above us shall quiver. And our souls flow in one down elemity's river."

So come in the evening, or come in the morning, Come when you're looked for, or come without warning, Kisses and welcome you'll find here before you. Light is my heart since the day we were plighted, Red is my check that they told me was blighted; The green of the trees looks far greener than ever, And the linets are singing, "True lovers don't sever! "'Tis a little thing To give a cup of water: yet its draught Of cool refreshment, drained by fevered lips, May give a shock of pleasure to the frame More exquisite than when acctarian juice Renews the life of joy in happiest hours, It is a little thing to speak a phrase Of common comfort, which by daily use Has almost lost its sense; yet on the car Of him who thought to die unmourned, 't will fall Like choicest music; fill the eye With gentle tears; relax the knotted hand To know the bonds of fellowship again; And shed on the departed soul a sense, More precious than the benizon of friends, About the honored death bed of the rich, To him who else were lonely, that another Of the great family is near and feels,"-- Ion,

Federal Clergy. Of all the moral trailors which this country has ever produced, none have been so shameless, debased, and reckless as those belonging to the clerical profession. In the last war with Great Britain, when our nation was struggling for its existence with a silvery low, as the subscriber feels confident he can sell Demostic as gigantic foe, we found a large portion of the clergy low as the lowest.
